biography

Lindsey Rush Hawkins, also known as L. Rush, is an artist and designer in the Atlanta area. Her personal artwork can be found on exhibit in the Roswell Cultural Arts Center, and in art shows such as Trinity, Work of Our Hands, and Dragon Con.

Issues of forgiveness, love, spirituality, and surreal relationships with nature are main focal areas of her work. These issues are expressed through the visual use of symbols, landscapes, textures, and color schemes. Much of Lindsey's inspiration comes from her childhood growing up on a farm in Southern Indiana. She still has dreams about the farmhouse and fields of open land. Within the farm community, Lindsey was in 4-H for ten years and still is just a country girl at heart. Through out the years, her graphic design career has taken her to San Francisco, New York City, Indianapolis, Chicago, and currently she has settled into the Atlanta area.
